Large US healthcare organizations continue to put trust in Sectra

ProMedica Health System chooses Sectra RIS

Shelton, CT – May 13, 2009 – ProMedica Health System has selected the IT and medical-technology company Sectra as their Radiology Information System (RIS) provider. ProMedica is one of the largest integrated health systems in the United States, spanning 27 counties throughout Ohio and Michigan.

Throughout the agreement with ProMedica Health System, Sectra will supply RIS products and direct service and support. For several years ProMedica Health System has been using Sectra PACS and will now benefit from the tight RIS/PACS integration delivered by Sectra, which is especially powerful with customers who have demands to deliver radiology services across several institutions and/or communicate between several healthcare providers.

ProMedica Health System owns or operates nine hospitals, accredited by the Joint Commission on Accreditation on Healthcare Organizations. Together these hospitals have more than 2,900 physicians and 15,000 employees that meet the needs of more than 2.5 million patients annually.

“ProMedica Health System’s decision to replace our legacy RIS with Sectra RIS was driven by integration and our need to work with a vendor who can respond to our demanding clinical and technology-driven environments,” says Tom DellaFlora, Vice President, Information Systems at ProMedica Health System”.

“By extending our relationship with ProMedica Health Systems and adding Sectra RIS to the existing Sectra PACS clinical environment, we will allow ProMedica to increase their operational efficiency and continue delivering the exceptional service expected by their extensive referring clinician and patient populations,” said Dr. John Goble, President of Sectra in North America.
